

MEETING COORDINATION

The Problem

Business owners juggling multiple partners, clients, and vendors often lose track of who needs to be where and when. Meetings get missed, video links go missing, and last-minute reschedules create confusion when they aren't communicated and updated properly across everyone's calendar.

What I Did

I coordinated a full week of meetings end-to-end for a client managing multiple external relationships — partners, vendors, and prospective clients — handling setup, video conferencing, and a live reschedule:

- Set up a multi-party strategy meeting with three partner organizations, each added as a guest with automatic email invitations
- Attached a Google Meet video link to every meeting so no one needed to hunt for conferencing details separately
- Configured a vendor follow-up call with a clear agenda note so the purpose of the call was obvious to all parties in advance
- Handled a real-time reschedule: when a client requested a new time after the invite was already sent, I moved the meeting, relabeled it clearly as rescheduled, and documented the reason directly in the event — so nothing was lost in translation

The Result

A fully coordinated week of meetings with zero manual back-and-forth: every attendee received their invite and video link automatically, and the rescheduled meeting was clearly flagged and documented so there was no confusion about the change.

Skills Demonstrated

- Multi-attendee meeting coordination across partners, vendors, and clients
- Google Calendar and Google Meet setup and management
- Clear documentation of schedule changes for accountability
- Responsive handling of last-minute client requests
